Dr. Agnes McLaren, a Scottish lady, came to India in 1909, having heard the stories of Indian women dying in large numbers during childbirth and due to other treatable medical conditions.

In India, she realized that she alone would not be able to do much, that was needed and hence she, on her own, embarked on a global effort to encourage other women doctors to come and work in the sub-continent. Despite her valiant efforts, without her knowing, she had set the ball rolling for others to pick up on her efforts.

From the other hemisphere, thousands of miles away, Sr. Dr. Mary Glowrey from Australia travelled to India to fulfil her mission. She realized that there was a strong need for Catholic hospitals to fulfil India's healthcare needs.

In 1943, Sr. Dr. Mary Glowrey, along with 16 other nuns, established the Catholic Hospital Association, now known as Catholic Health Association of India (CHAI).

Tragically,
Sr. Dr. Mary Glowrey
passed away in 1957,
six years before her
dream was realized.

However, the vision persisted and on July 8, 1963, St. John's Medical College officially commenced classes at its temporary premises in St. Mary's Orphanage.
